

Chantal Harwood, 9, of Georgetown inspected the silk cloth she printed her name on as magician Rob Evans prepared to perform a magic trick, as part of the Evans and Evans Magic Show, in Georgetown Market Place during March Break. (Below) Taking advantage of the craft tables set up at the mall, Christie Duguay, 13, of Georgetown, enjoyed creating a hat out of construction paper and various materials during March Break activities.

There was slithering room only last week as Georgetown Market Place was filled with kids like Noah Capetola, 4, (above) and Rachel Spencer (right) who were brave enough to sport a bull snake necktie at the 'Sciensational Ssnakes' show, which featured live reptiles of all shapes, sizes and origin. The four-foot long bull snake is native to Alberta and Saskatchewan and is harmless to humans.
