Dairy Queen has introduced sugar-free vanilla orange bars and fudge bars for those with diabetes who still want to enjoy a chilly treat. They are also working on a new initiative to bring in sugar-free Dilly Bars; soft-serve vanilla ice cream dipped in chocolate.

Laura Secord provides a Brownie Fudge Brownie frozen yogurt that is low in sugar and the Glen Oven offers "staple" flavours in sugar-free format for those with diabetes, as well as frozen yogurt. Sammy's ice cream carries soft ice cream for people with peanut allergies. "It's completely safe because it comes out of a machine, there's no contamination," says Turner. A "Frozen Paw" is also offered in three flavours:

Oreo, Skor or Smarties are mixed with soft-serve ice cream. Cyrus Bapooj and mother Mahrukh have lived in the Halton Region for about 23 years, and though Cyrus has visited Sammy's previously, it was Mahrukh's first trip.

"I had to get here," she says with a laugh. "I like the slushie," says Cyrus. "I don't really have a favourite flavour (of ice cream)."

The old rule remains; everything in moderation. For instance, I wouldn't suggest curling up with an old movie, a spoon and a litre of Death by Chocolate on a lonely Saturday night, but when even science has proven that ice cream can put a smile on your face, who could pass up a scoop or two every once in a while?
