

Economical and easy entertaining

Entertaining at home is an incredibly comfortable, cost-effective way to spend time with friends and family. Long lineups, waiting for a table at a restaurant and spending loads of money don't have to be the norm.

"The trend in entertaining has shifted to casual get-togethers in the home," says Anita Griffin, Canadian brand manager for Brizo. "Whether having the neighbours over for a few rounds of euchre or hosting a casual dinner for a large group of family and friends, homeowners are now looking for more ways to make their homes conducive to entertaining."

Break away from the hassles of going out with Griffin's tips to making your home entertainment-ready:

- Make your kitchen guest-ready. Think about adding an island. It's a great place for guests to congregate and gives additional counter space for preparation. Better yet, add a sink to the island—this will help keep you focused on your guests while still getting the food prepared.

- Take a seat. Invest in comfortable interior and exterior furniture, and be sure to plan for enough seating for everyone. Traditional table and chairs are great, but consider adding other casual seating like high bar stools.

- Minimize work. Make entertaining easier on yourself by investing in the right appliances. For example, a Brizo pot-filler faucet will ensure you aren't moving around the kitchen with heavy pots and an energy efficient dishwasher will make clean-up a breeze.

- Get outside. In the spring and summer months, give the inside of your house a rest and let the party spill into the backyard. A barbecue is a practical tool to making casual meals for friends, and nothing is more relaxing than kicking back on a well-maintained deck or patio to enjoy the summer weather.
