

Miss Acton to vie for CNE crown

Larissa Schaubreitner already has one crown, but she will be vying for another one later this summer in the Ambassador of the Fairs competition at the CNE.

Schaubreitner, 2009's Miss Acton Fall Fair, will be competing with 70 other fair ambassadors from across Ontario for the title that takes the winner across the province as a representative of the CNE and all agricultural fairs.

The competition will be held Aug. 20 to 21 (preliminary round) and the ambassador will be selected on Aug. 22.

Contestants are interviewed by a panel of judges who decide the finalists on the basis of community knowledge and involvement, knowledge of the CNE, agriculture, personality and presentation. They must give a five-minute speech on agriculture, agriculture societies or some aspect of their fair.

The field is narrowed to three finalists who must answer an impromptu question.

The winning candidate represents the CNE for the next year, promoting, educating and informing the public on Canadian agriculture and bridging the gap between rural and urban communities. They also visit many fairs and special events throughout the year.

The ambassador wins a number of prizes, including $3,500 from the CNE, cash from the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies, a Bulova watch, hair services from William Saab for a year, all expenses paid for the entire CNE with a suite at Westin Harbour Castle, use of a car and other prizes and gift certificates.

LARISSA SCHAUBREITNER

Schaubreitner is currently enrolled in the Hearing Instrument Specialist Program at Conestoga College. She hopes to work at the audiology clinics in Bayfield, where she currently volunteers.

She enjoys a wide range of activities from indoor rock climbing and kayaking during the summer, to cooking and baking. She also plays the piano. After spending time in the Air Cadet Corp. she developed a talent for target shooting, and she has also completed two years of an American sign-language course.
