It's all about authenticity here at Hungry Hollow Smokehouse & Grille. And that means you can't classify us under "fast food." There's simply nothing fast about real, authentic southern-style barbecue. These meats are cooked on low temperature 225 degrees for hours and hours until the smoky flavour permeates every sinew.

We have only had our doors open a short 4 weeks but have already had a lot of traffic from locals and also people from as far away as Niagara Falls and Collingwood who have traveled to Georgetown to experience some true Southern BBQ.

Owner Michael Parsons is a 50 year resident of Georgetown and brings his Low & Slow BBQ methods for you to savour.

Hungry Hollow Smokehouse & Grille is located at 136 Guelph St across from Christ the King High School, we are open Mon to Thurs 11am to 8pm and Friday & Saturday till 9 pm, Sunday is family day around here.

We have a saying around here and we wear it proudly on our shirts, "We Like it Low & Slow" and we think you will also.

Andrea Scibilia started in the family business when he was in elementary school. Instead of going home after school, he would go to his family's fruit market and garden centre, located on Guelph Street.

"I started at the fruit market after school because both my mom and dad were there working. I couldn't stay home alone," Andrea says. "I've been involved in the business since I was very young."

Andrea's parents, Joe and Maria, opened the fruit market and garden centre in 1972. Four years ago, Andrea decided to focus on the gardening side of the business and transformed it into Georgetown Garden Centre after Joe retired - sort of.

"I'm still making him work," Andrea says with a laugh.

The garden centre offers quality gardening and vegetable plants, as well as hanging baskets, soils, fertilizers, seeds and houseplants. Pumpkins are available in the fall and the centre has poinsettias and Christmas trees in the winter.

With spring officially here and summer right around the corner, now is the perfect time to get gardening.

"Spring is my favourite," Andrea says. "After a long winter, everybody gets excited to see the warm weather and to add colour in their gardens."
