The 'eyes' have it

Georgetown optometrist Dr. Caroline Teske admires a pair of 'eye glasses' decorated by École Sacré-Coeur Junior Kindergarten student Chloé Athanase, 4, to build awareness of the Ontario Eye See...Eye Learn program, which provides OHIP-insured eye exams and free eyeglasses for Junior Kindergarten children in conjunction with Halton school boards.

Members of the École Sacré-Coeur Environment Committee carefully plant their garden each year and eagerly await the harvest of vegetables they donate to the Georgetown Bread Basket.

They have also planted numerous trees and put in a butterfly garden in an effort to beautify their school's yard.

They love to watch their efforts come to fruition, but are frustrated and disappointed that someone has damaged their plants and trees and stolen their vegetables— three times since July.

"We wonder why you broke our trees in our school yard and stole the vegetables in our vegetable garden," said students Justin Lavictoire and Kelly Karim in a letter sent to The Independent & Free Press. "Our vegetable garden produces an abundance of vegetables that we donate to the Georgetown Bread Basket, an organization that most of you are familiar with."

The garden and other plantings are a school project that took seven months of planning.

"We had to draw a plan, then we had
