

Grandview House

Grandview House, located at 56 Queen St., in Georgetown was built in 1880 by Mr. Goodwillie, a lawyer from Toronto who was perhaps one of the town's first commuters. The house had 28 rooms, tennis courts and bowling greens. The property was sold in 1906 to H.T. Arnold, who operated a glove manufacturing business in both Acton and Georgetown. As there was little demand for mansions in the 1930s, the home was converted to apartments by J.B. MacKenzie in 1937, and has remained an apartment building.

517 Main St., Glen Williams

Charles Williams built the familiar red brick building located at 517 Main Street in Glen Williams in the 1830's. Made of handmade brick with walls three bricks thick, it has had many incarnations from a general store to an antiques shop to its current home of the Copper Kettle Pub.
