

Georgetown midwife to 'deliver hope' at Friday's fundraising reception

Georgetown midwife Nicole Geerlinks will share her inspiring story during a Delivering Hope fundraiser at Halton Hills Cultural Centre's Gallery on Friday, Nov. 26.

The 7 p.m. dessert reception includes an African drumming ensemble and stories of impact and change. Geerlinks will highlight her work in Rwanda with Delivering Hope, a non-profit organization set up to reduce mother and infant death rates in developing countries.

More than 500,000 women die annually from pregnancy-related causes, primarily in developing countries. The group aims to educate midwives, partner with government educational programs and provide patient care.

"Please join us in being a part of the solution," said Geerlinks. "Support the training of midwives in a developing country that could deliver up to 220 babies each year. Your involvement could help save the lives of mother and child. Come and learn how you can make a difference."
