

Local student earns Bell Scholarship at Mount Allison

When it was time to pursue studies after high school, Kylie de Chastelain looked to the East Coast.

The Georgetown District High School graduate has received the Bell Scholarship from Mount Allison University. Valued at $48,000 over four years, it is the most prestigious award at the New Brunswick school.

de Chastelain is studying arts but is also pursuing her interests in science, as part of a chemistry research team on Saturday mornings. She is also involved in Leadership Mount Allison—the university's signature leadership development program, the Choral and Celtic societies, and the Mount Allison Global Brigades team, which will be travelling to Honduras over the reading week, as a member of the medical brigades.

In Georgetown de Chastelain was involved with highland dancing, the Gaudeamus Children's Choir, piano, and worked part-time at a local children's bookstore. At GDHS, she was the captain of the school's debate team, and the leader/founder of the International Baccalaureate student league where she ran a series of fundraisers for Free the Children and Haiti relief.

What's next for this young lady? "I'd really like to do graduate work abroad," said de Chastelain. "I'm very interested in some of Mount Allison's summer archaeology field school programs, as well as the summer exchange to India. I think that Mount Allison will provide me with the tools and resources to see these visions through, and I have no doubt that an undergrad degree from here will prepare me very well for future studies."

de Chastelain is the daughter of Duncan and Debbie de Chastelain of Georgetown.
