Ontario book distributor Georgetown Terminal Warehouses is offering a new service to its publisher clients: print-on-demand. Targeting the so-called "long-tail" of consumer demand, Georgetown's POD service will allow publishers to minimize warehousing costs while keeping low-demand titles in print, says director of business development Hank Visser. The service is ideally suited to ultra-short runs of one to five copies, and print runs of up to roughly 1,000 copies, though Visser says larger print runs of several thousand copies are also feasible.

They will feature the same type of unique shopping experience, supplying new and consigned quality ladies clothing and accessories in a boutique style space combined with excellent personal service provided by a knowledgeable friendly staff. They are also planning on expanding their current Georgetown location by moving upstairs and hope to have this completed by the end of February.
