No more wedding knick-knacks

If you've attended an excessive number of weddings in your life, you may have a collection of uneaten bonbonnières sitting on a dusty shelf.

And now that it's your turn to get hitched, you and your spouse-to-be are wondering if wedding favours are really worth the cost.

For a meaningful gift that will show your appreciation, consider making a charitable donation on behalf of your guests. Web sites like www.ccfcanda.ca offer a variety of charitable giving options that will allow you to pick the donation that is right for you.

Perhaps you or your spouse-to-be work in the teaching or medical profession— why not buy books and pencils for children overseas or provide medical supplies to a poor community?

You will be surprised at how this simple gesture will get people excited and make your wedding reception stand out from the rest.

ClubLink makes couples 'feel at home'

"We make them feel at home and take care of all the clean up."

More and more couples are choosing to host their wedding ceremony on site. ClubLink clubs are ideal venues for such functions. With breathtaking views overlooking the course, ceremonies are stunning.

"You can't beat us for pictures, inside and out, there is a 'Kodak Moment' location on every site," says Pierre Demers, ClubLink's Director, Catering Sales & Marketing.

A large number of staff members become involved in the planning and execution of a wedding. Of course, the first person a couple has contact with is their catering manager, but the food and beverage manager, executive chef, sous chef, kitchen staff, dishwashers, bartenders and servers all ensure the wedding is perfect.

Once the wedding day has passed, ClubLink catering managers keep in touch with brides and grooms. Clubhouses become second homes, where past brides and grooms host their showers, baptisms and anniversaries.

"Weddings are not just about the big day; we build life-long relationships," says Susan Angell, Catering and Sales Manager at RattleSnake Point Golf Club. "The truest testament to customer satisfaction is that couples come back again and again to celebrate their special life events."
