A Time To Remember was a pleasant trip down memory lane

By TED BROWN
Staff Writer

As Georgetown Globe Musical Productions' latest offering, A Time to Remember opened at the Norval Parish Hall this weekend, patrons were treated to a pleasant trip down memory lane.

The show was comprised of numbers from musicals the group has performed during the past decade, and was a tribute to the time spent rehearsing at that hall. This fall, Globe members will be rehearsing at their new location at Georgetown Armoury.

The music from the first act was selected from some of the group's more traditional shows, as show master of ceremonies Jhuntue Grey opened with a rousing rendition of Willkommen from Cabaret.

A spirited version of Oklahoma gave the show another lift, as Bill McBride, Joe Gomes, Jordan Davidson, Lois Frasier, Nanci MacNeil-Llewellyn and Sharon Nimmo got into the act.

Perhaps the most memorable song of the night was Mark Llewellyn's part as Fagin from Oliver!, as he sang Reviewing the Situation, complete with costume. The mystical Ever After from Into the Woods wrapped up the first act, as the full company showed their stuff with the challenging Stephen Sondheim song.

Act Two featured more contemporary music, as the group performed from the more bizarre musicals over the years. A haunting, poignant Something Just Broke from Assassins was quite memorable, as the group were lit in red. Evita's Don't Cry for Me Argentina gave Chelsea Beatty and opportunity to showcase her talent. Melissa Fischer and Sharon Nimmo were quite effective with What You Don't Know About Women from City of Angels, and the full company had the audience in their grip with The Impossible Dream from Man of La Mancha.

Run Freedom Run from Urinetown was a great choice with the group singing the old time gospel rendition with lots of spirit.

As usual, Globe's annual February cabaret gives the members who are not always in the spotlight an opportunity to shine in this show. If the sampling of new vocalists featured at this year's show is any indication, then we have some good things coming in the future from Georgetown Globe Musical Productions.

The show continues its run this week.
