Soy-based finished floors a new 'green' innovation

Imagine your family sitting on a floor so healthy and so eco-friendly that it actually was awarded the "Children and Schools certification" by world-renowned standards organization Greenguard?

That is exactly what Canadian Manufacturer, Mercier Wood Flooring set out to achieve when it first set their sights on developing the cleanest, least harmful and most eco-friendly flooring available anywhere. And now, after years of development, consumers, daycares and school boards can now benefit from this unique product never before introduced on the market.

Made using 100 per cent pure soybean oil, the new Mercier Greenguard factory-finished flooring boasts these unique benefits:

- Zero VOC content (volatile organic compound)
- Hypoallergenic
- Antimicrobial
- 25% more durable than previous Mercier Generations floors
- 35-year comprehensive warranty
- The only flooring with the Greenguard School and Children certification
- Available in all species, colors and finishes

"Making homes a healthier environment to live in is a goal we have long recognized and eco-friendliness has been the core value of our company since our first day. We are proud now to introduce a new Generation of flooring, Mercier's Greenguard "Children and Schools" certified flooring," said Michel Collin, Director of Marketing for Mercier Wood Flooring.

With this new flooring option you don't have to sacrifice great looking floors for health-consciousness as designer Nancy Soccio of Dolce Design in Montreal explains: "with Mercier's Design + Program, you can create a natural wood floor that offers both a distinct character to your décor, as well as a healthy, eco-friendly choice for your entire family."
