Georgetown Candlelight Tributes

Adam Fountain, Jack Harrison and Scott Reid salute the Remembrance Park cenotaph.

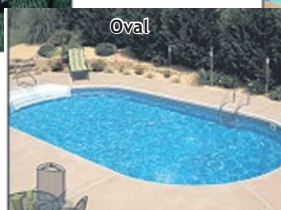

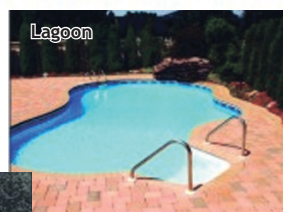

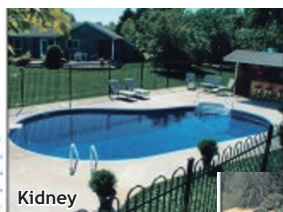

More than a thousand students from every school in Halton Hills gathered at Remembrance Park in Georgetown and at the Glen Williams Cenotaph on a bright, sunny spring day to participate in the ninth annual Georgetown Candlelight Tributes. Taking place on May 5 this year, the event celebrates the anniversary of V-E Day, which marked the end of World War II in Europe. The students placed candles on the Georgetown and Glen Williams cenotaphs as a symbolic passing of the torch of remembrance and greeted the veterans in attendance. "The Candlelight Tributes are a chance to shake hands and say thank you to the veterans," says Candlelight Tributes chairman Barry Timleck. "You will feel good and the veterans will feel even better." Thank you, veterans.
