Cockburn wins Gardiner scholarship

Ryan Cockburn of Georgetown was named the winner of the Ethel Gardiner Manufacturing Scholarship Award at the recent graduation ceremony for the Centre for Skills Development & Training in Burlington.

"Now is the time to train for an exciting career that is in high demand," said Kathy Mills, Chief Administrative Officer of The Centre. "It's been a tough few years for the economy and job seekers, especially in manufacturing, but we know that manufacturing is recovering, and we know that employers are looking to hire qualified people in the electrical and construction industries as well."

Cockburn recently signed as a millwright apprentice at FLO Components in Mississauga.

The Centre, which provides pre-apprenticeship training in the construction, electrical and manufacturing trades, recognized three other students with Exceptional Overall Performance Awards: Stefan Ford of Hamilton (Residential Construction program); Kelsey Lang of Mississauga (Tool & Die/Millwright program); and Matthew Policelli of Mississauga (Electrical program).

"Life doesn't always follow a straight and narrow path. The best learning is sometimes a curve, or even something you see in the rearview mirror," said Gillian Tuck-Kutarna, the Halton Hills Trustee for the Halton District School Board and a member of The Centre's Board.
