Volunteers wanted to survey WPEC trees

Want to know more about how to identify trees and monitor their growth?

Willow Park Ecology Centre (WPEC) is starting its second year of surveying the trees and invasive species of plants in the park. Once again WPEC has partnered with the Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR) Rangers and invites interested members of the public to assist them in learning how to identify and monitor trees and other vegetation.

One goal for WPEC is to plant and encourage success of vegetation that is native to this South-Central Ontario eco-zone area. Last year was the first forestry workshop and monitoring session. Now it's time to reassess the trees and see how they fared during the past year. The 2010 baseline will be used to re-measure growth and changes to the naturalized environment.

On Monday, July 18, (9 a.m. until 3 p.m.) there will be a training session in WPEC led by the Association for Education Resources (ACER). Anyone interested in learning about forestry and how to monitor trees using Smithsonian protocols, and then helping to practice their new knowledge as a volunteer on Tuesday, July 19 and/or Wednesday, July 20, is welcome.

If you visit the park you might see stakes with markers to identify the areas being surveyed, please don't disturb the markers as they are important to the future of the program.
