BOTTOM RIGHT: Hungry revellers at the Big Chill dance, which took place June 4 at the Memorial Arena, dropped by the Hungry Hollow Smokehouse and Grille booth to fuel up before heading back to the dance floor. Last month, the restaurant's owner, Mike Parsons, donated a portion of the sales from the dance to the Big Chill, which was organized by the Georgetown Firefighters Association to raise money for the Georgetown Hospital Foundation. On hand for the presentation are (from left): firefighter Bryan Krafczek, Mike Parsons and firefighter Brian Babcock.

At the Halton Industry Education Council's recent Spring Breakfast with the Mayors, the organization spotlighted its Connecting Generations Through Technology program, which had local students interview and make mini biographical movies about seniors in their communities. Gardiner Public School student Fiona Smith (front row, far left) joined Halton students Natalie, Matthew and Madelyn in sharing their experiences with the program. Also at the breakfast are (back row) David Euale, Michael Pautler, Mayor Rick Goldring of Burlington and Halton Regional Chair Gary Carr.
