Q: I recently ran a marathon and noticed that there were many runners with bright coloured tape on different parts of their bodies. What is this, and what is its function?

A: What you saw is most likely referred to as "Kinesio-Tape". It is a type of therapeutic and sports tape that gives stability to joints and muscles, but does not affect circulation and range of motion. It is also used for prevention, edema and pain control. It is different from traditional sports taping which predominantly stabilizes and supports a joint, obstructing the flow of bodily fluids. Kinesio Taping is based on the philosophy that aims to give free range of motion in order to allow the body's muscular system to heal itself biomechanically. Kinesio Tape has an elasticity of 130 - 140 percent of its original length, which will allow full range but prevent overstretch of muscles. Kinesio Tape is used for various conditions, including muscular facilitation/inhibition, carpal tunnel syndrome, low back strain, knee conditions, rotator cuff problems, tennis elbow, plantar fascitis, edema, ankle sprains, achilles tendinitis, and many more.

If you are considering this type of taping for yourself, ensure that you see a health professional, such as a physiotherapist, that is a certified Kinesio Tape practitioner.

Q: How can I help my teen avoid depression?

A: When teens get depressed it can hurt their school grades, relationships and health and lead to serious and long lasting problems including drug and alcohol use, teen pregnancy, failing grades and suicide. Research shows there are some things parents can do to help their teen avoid depression.

Teen years can lead to rebellion and arguments. It is important, however, to emphasize the positives in your teen. Find skills and talents that your child has that you can praise so that your communication with your teen does not focus only on negatives. Help your teen build positive self esteem. Promote participation in organized sports or extracurricular activities because they are shown to help boost self-esteem and prevent depression. Be interested in the activities your teen does enjoy and celebrate their successes with them. Encourage your child to be involved in other physical activity to improve overall health. Walking, biking, and exercise are all good activities when done in moderation.

Remember that stressful familial events also affect and contribute to depression in children. Events such as divorce or parent job loss both can cause increased poverty and result in teen depression. The negative impact is most severe when the child is worried, does not know what to expect and there is not enough parental emotional support to help them deal with the concerns. Talking to your child is always a good thing and when a teen faces depression, talking can be crucial to avoid the feelings of isolation that can add to depression.

In counselling, communication skills, stress management techniques, and finding ways to cope with problems while the problems are still small can all serve to enhance resiliency and enable teens to avoid depression.

... Lend Me Your Ears

HOW DOES LOUD NOISE CREATE HYPERTENSION?

It appears to affect the nervous system, signalling the peripheral blood vessels to constrict as though under attack! This triggers a surge of adrenaline and other fight-or-flight chemicals into the bloodstream - a response that carries with it the potential for glandular or cardiovascular changes, in other words, unwanted noise creates the same final results as increased stress (try to avoid)!

Tooth Chatter

DENTURE HUMOUR

A very elderly patient of mine was unhappy with her new teeth. They "didn't fit" she complained. After examining the dentures, I told her that they appeared to be just fine. "In my mouth they're fine" she agreed. "But they don't fit in my glass for soaking!"

The very elderly lady I was preparing for surgery refused to let me remove her dentures. Concerned about the administration of the anesthetic, I clipped a note on her cart: "Patient confused. Unable to remove dentures." Later that day a nurse handed the note back to me. It read: "Patient has her own natural teeth. Who's confused?"

In the few years before her death at age 101; my aunt's dentures were causing her discomfort and the nurses often removed them. Now, at her funeral, my seven-year-old nephew, Nicholas, who used to accompany his mother when she visited our aunt, gazed down at his great aunt. "Mom", he whispered, "she looks different". My sister said, "That's because she has her teeth in." Nicholas threw his hands in the air. "Now they give them to her."
