

With a possible top speed of 200 km/h, the Ford Fiesta ST Concept shown at the recent Frankfurt Motor Show is part of Ford's worldwide performance vehicle strategy.

Ford reveals vision for future Fiesta STs

Ford won't say if it is coming to Canada but it did reveal its vision for a future high-performance Fiesta ST at last week's Frankfurt Motor Show.

The Ford Fiesta ST Concept signals the next step in Ford Motor Company's global performance vehicle strategy and hints at how a future Fiesta ST performance model might look when it joins the Focus ST in the global Ford small car portfolio.

The Fiesta ST Concept combines eye-catching, muscular and sporty styling with a dynamic sports chassis and a high-performance powertrain capable of delivering impressive fuel economy with low CO2 emissions.

Like Ford's World Rally Championship contender, the Fiesta RS WRC, Fiesta ST Concept uses a 1.6-litre Ford EcoBoost petrol engine to deliver performance every bit as breathtaking as the vehicle's striking design.

For the Fiesta ST Concept, the 1.6-litre Ford EcoBoost engine achieves a target power output of around 180 hp enough to propel the concept vehicle from 0-100 km/h in less than seven seconds.

A top speed exceeding 220 km/h is possible.
