

OCTOBER IS

Car Care

MONTH

Prepare your vehicle for the hard months ahead

October is a very special month for all Canadians, one that heralds a real change of season. Although its first days are often warm and sunny, its last days are clear warnings that winter is just around the corner. If you own a vehicle or two, October is the month when you should have a closer look at them and get them ready for changing conditions.

On the whole, today's new cars require less maintenance than older cars, yet they still need some tender loving care if you expect them to last long and serve you well. This is especially true if you want them to work properly in the winter.

If you want a smoothly running vehicle for the cold season, it is best to bring your car or light truck to your local dealership or your local garage and have it thoroughly inspected. No matter where you live in Canada, it is wise to equip your vehicle with a winter tread, even if it's a brand new purchase that came with all-season tires. Experienced drivers know the need for real winter tires for every region — in fact, one manufacturer calls them "cold weather" tires.

On the other hand, if you have some basic mechanical knowledge, you can always look over your vehicle and check liquid levels, filters, battery, and tires. You can replace some parts yourself, such as windshield wipers, while others, such as the exhaust system, ought to be inspected at a garage.

No matter how you look at it, October is the best month to prepare your vehicle for the hard months ahead. And remember, it's not only for the good of the car; it's also for your safety and that of your passengers.
