Dance in the Glen ... every Thursday

On Thursdays, from 7-9 p.m., there is a place you can go and have a bit of fun, dancing.

A live band plays good old country, rock and roll, jazz and other music at St. Alban's Church Hall, 537 Main St. Doors are open at 6:30 p.m. The venue is handicap accessible with lots of parking. Singles are welcome. Admission is $5.

The evening is being run by three Georgetown seniors: Christine Gamus (drums), Carol Hawke and Jim Dunham (keyboard). Hawke's vocals are mainly old country style with Gamus doing a variety of blues, jazz, pop, old R&R and a bit of country. Hawke also helps out by demonstrating how to do some of the novelty dances like the bird dance, twist and macarena.

"Being a group that plays all different types of music does have its problems," said Dunham. "Like Barnum & Baily said, 'you can please some of the people part of the time, but never all of the people all of the time'. We are slowly finding out what the patient folks want and it's getting better."

The trio is planning this to be a long-term venture and is arranging various guest musicians and singers on special nights but some theme shows.

For more details, call Hawke, 416-889-0252 or Dunham, 905-873-0310.

Routes of Country returns to the Century

On November 5, Muir Family Singers will return to continue the story of the growth of country music in The Routes of Country 2 at the Century Church Theatre in Hillsburgh.

This is a follow-up to last year's sold-out hit show—a musical journey through the history of country music.

Drummer Brandon Muir will have more personal and family stories, along with selected historical anecdotes, on the great performers and songwriters who have been responsible for the growth and popularity of country music, while a formidable assemblage of musicians and singers will bring the music to life.

Along with the ever-popular Muir Family, Jeff Barry will be there, and Canada's leading steel guitarist, Doug Johnson. This promises to be the country music highlight of the year.

Showtime is 8 p.m. Tickets are $25 inclusive, at the Box Office, 519-855-4586, www.centurychurchtheatre.com

Passion and betrayal in The Lion in Winter

GLT's main stage season will open October 28 in the Acton Town Hall Centre with the romantic comedy, The Lion in Winter, by James Goldman and directed by Andrew Humentiuik. King Henry II has called his sons home and has released his wife, Eleanor of Aquitaine, for the Christmas holidays. He has decided to announce his successor, and what follows is a battle of wits, with twists and turns and all out betrayals around every corner. You certainly don't want to miss this magnificent period festival entry. From left is Queen Eleanor (Anthea Hoare), King Henry (Ken Smith) and Prince Richard (Ian O'Brien).
