

Pets of the Month Two are better than one

Two is better than one when their names are Chico and Chiquita who are male and female Jack Russell terriers— and what cute, happy little dogs they are.

Clothed in their black and white coats, these bright little dogs arrived at the Shelter as “surrenders” as their owner had passed away. Chico and Chiquita are siblings who have spent all their lives together and are now a healthy nine years young. Nine years for a Jack means they have a lot of living still to do, as most Jacks can reach 15 years+ in a caring home, and Chico and Chiquita have been well looked after.

Even at the Shelter they are happy dogs, both housebroken, have basic commands, low energy, and are good to walk. Another plus is that Chico and Chiquita enjoy “walkies” but also love playing with each other and enjoy themselves immensely sniffing around and just being together. On the flip side they are equally happy settled down side by side with their chewies.

Chico is much larger than his petite sister, very sociable with people, affectionate and loves to snuggle Chiquita is so feminine and also very affectionate and friendly. The duo have true Jack Russell personalities and tolerate some dogs, but would not suit a cat household.

These endearing little Jacks led a quiet sheltered life in the same home for nine years and have had no experience with children, so young children would not be a suitable match. Children 12+ who would respect a warning growl would be considered. Chico and Chiquita will definitely need a home with a securely fenced yard.

In summary, Chico and Chiquita would thrive in a home presenting them with a similar atmosphere as they were used to. Basically low energy, the siblings give a lot of pleasure as they joyously explore their world together and they will reward you with lots of love and affection.

We feel they should be adopted together as it would be too stressful on them to be separated. One look at their picture will, we hope, encourage you to call the Shelter at 519-833-2287 or email adoption@uppercredit.com
