

Planner says town's slow growth can be tied to water constraints

Planning staff updated Town council on the latest Census 2011 data released by Statistics Canada.

Halton Hills grew by 3,719 people between 2006 and 2011. That brought the town's population from 55,289 to 59,008.

The percentage of growth was 6.7 per cent— among the lowest of the Greater Golden Horseshoe (GGH) regions. In the 2006 Census, Halton Hills had 14.7 per cent growth.

In a memo to Town council, Acting Manager of Planning Policy Steve Burke said the slow growth was expected due to the water and wastewater servicing constraints.

Milton was the fastest growing community at 56.5 per cent while Hamilton was the slowest at 3.1 per cent.

It was the second consecutive Census that Milton had the fastest growth population in Canada.
