

Police, community search for missing boy

Georgetown area towards Mississauga with the assistance of Peel Police after receiving information that Adam may have been seen near a Petro Canada gas station at 9980 Mississauga Rd. in Mississauga at approximately 4:15 a.m. Monday.

Police had appealed to area residents to search their property and outbuildings for the boy.

In an earlier press release police said Adam has Asperger's Syndrome—the mildest and highest functioning end of the autism disorders—and might hide to avoid being found. They warned the public not to approach Adam, or console him, as it might put him in medical distress, and instead immediately call 911.

Police said Adam suffered from a heart condition and if he became anxious or agitated his heart rate could rise rapidly causing a decrease in his blood pressure, which could be fatal.

Adam, a Grade 9 Christ the King Secondary School student, had left the house in a t-shirt, pajama bottoms, socks and no shoes.

Cross said the police were "very grateful" for the public's assistance throughout the search.
