

SPORTS & LEISURE

Cameron in like Flint for NCAA field title

The University of Denver Pioneers and their junior midfielder from Georgetown, Cameron Flint, have the opportunity to reach the NCAA Division I final four in men's field lacrosse for the second straight year with a victory this weekend in Annapolis, Md.

Standing in the way of the ninth-seeded Pioneers, however, is the nation's top-ranked team, the Loyola University Maryland Greyhounds, who are 15-1 this season, but just got past Denver 14-13 in overtime at the ECAC Tournament earlier this month.

Flint, a 21-year-old finance major, scored once last Saturday in the 9-6 Pioneers' 16-14 win over eighth-seeded North Carolina in the round of 16.

Orangeville's Jeremy Noble had three goals and seven assists to lead the way.

Denver made it to the NCAA semifinals for the first time last year in Baltimore before bowing out to the eventual national champion Virginia Cavaliers 14-9.

The Cavaliers knocked the Princeton Tigers and Georgetown South resident Mike MacDonald out of the NCAA playdowns last weekend with a 6-5 triumph. MacDonald, a freshman, was held off the scoresheet.

Another product of the Halton Hills Jr. B Bulldogs, JJ Laforet, had his season come to an end on Sunday after the Stony Brook (N.Y.) Seawolves lost 19-9 to Johns Hopkins. The 22-year-old junior finance major had an assist in the defeat.

CAMERON FLINT

Collision course

Bishop Reding Royals' goalkeeper Shayna Sasek punches away the ball as she collides with teammate Marissa Renn and Christ the King Jaguar attackers Lisa Laidlaw (left) and Briana Santos in this scoring attempt in Halton high school senior girls' soccer action Monday afternoon in Milton. The teams played to a 1-1 draw. Regular-season action concluded yesterday (Wednesday) and the sixth-place Jags will likely begin the AAAA playoffs on the road next week.

Photo by Graham Paine Metroland West Media Group

Georgetown man nominates town for Kraft Tour

By EAMONN MAHER

Staff Writer

Georgetown is on the list of Canadian communities that are vying to host The Sports Network for a day in August and receive $25,000 for the Halton Hills Arena Users Group.

The fourth-annual Kraft Celebration Tour is slated to run Aug. 17-26 when TSN will broadcast its flagship sports news program Sports-Centre live in 10 communities across Canada in 10 days, with the winning entries also awarded $25,000 each towards improvements to a local recreation facility.

Local native Dave Frost made the nomination for Georgetown and as someone with three young children who himself grew up playing minor hockey in Georgetown, would like to see the funds go towards the construction of the two new arenas at the Mold-Masters Sportsplex and another in Acton.

"The bottom line for me doing this to hopefully get something to help out with the building of the new rinks," said Frost, a distribution supervisor for Gerrie Electric.

Frost put together a short essay and submitted a photo of him with his three kids posing with the Stanley Cup here last December to illustrate why Georgetown deserves to be a part of the tour.

So far, 82 communities have had their nominations accepted and the closing date is June 10. On July 1, the field will be whittled down to 20 towns and an on-line voting contest will begin on July 9 to determine the 10 winners.

As part of the nomination requirements for TSN's Kraft Celebration Tour, local resident Dave Frost sent in a picture of the Stanley Cup's visit to Georgetown in late December. Pictured with Frost are his children (from left): 11-month-old Erica, Sarah, 8, and Josh, 4.

*Photo by Alex Docker
Halton Camera Exchange*

LOOKING FOR SERVICE DIRECTORY?
SEE PAGES 18 & 19 OF TODAY'S REAL ESTATE LEADER