

Tribal work

Joseph Gibbons student Andrew Willett, 7, enjoyed making a sand castle with his tribe as part of the school's play day just before school was let out for the summer. Each Tribe had nine students from Kindergarten to Grade 5, and they came up with their own name in September. They spent one period each month working on co-operative activities. The tribes of kids were able to wear the tie-dyed T-shirts they created the week before.

Irrigation Systemitis

[ir' i-gā'shən • sīs'təm ey-tis]

Adj: Using a broken or inefficient irrigation system, wastes water.

Tip: Have your system inspected and install a rain sensor instead.

Don't be a water waster

Summer is here and with it summer travel – Are you prepared?

Disasters, big and small, can occur anywhere and any time. Just as you need a home emergency preparedness plan, you also need a travel plan. Remember to pack extra clothing, cash (or have access to it), medications and copies of important documents. Take phone numbers of emergency contacts and leave your contacts copies of your itinerary. If you are driving, know what to do in an emergency: pull completely off the road; turn on your flashers; hook your 'call police' sign on the driver's window or call your roadside assistance company; leave the window cracked open for ventilation; and only open the window or doors for police or your automobile service provider. Finally, make sure you have a Car Survival Kit. Learn more at www.halton.ca/beprepared. Safe travels!
