Nightclub patron charged with theft

A Mississauga man is facing several charges in a failed attempt to steal money and flee from a Norval nightclub early Friday.

Halton Police report a man, while ordering a drink at the bar at Nashville North (530 Guelph Street), swiped a stack of cash from the register while the bartender's back was turned.

The man then ordered another drink and, once again when the bartender's back was turned, reached over the bar and grabbed another stack of cash.

The man then tipped the bartender and left the bar area.

The bar employee immediately noticed the missing money and alerted management and security staff.

The suspect was located in the bar and as he was being escorted to the security office he jumped off the second level of the nightclub and attempted to flee the scene.

Security staff gave chase and the man was apprehended in a swamp near the nightclub. Police were called and took custody of the man.

A search of the man revealed several thousands of dollars in cash and a small amount of marijuana.

The entire incident was captured on video surveillance.

The 23-year-old Mississauga man was transported to hospital and treated for minor injuries he suffered when he jumped from the second floor of the nightclub.

Charged with theft under $5,000, possession of a controlled substance and two counts of breach of probation is Chevonie Morgan, 23, of Mississauga.
