

It's lights out until next week at intersection

The traffic signal at the intersection of Five Sideroad and Ninth Line will likely be fixed next week.

The signal were pulled down Tuesday, Aug. 21 after a large transport trailer made a right-hand turn and brought down a hydro pole, lines and the traffic light hanging from them.

According to Tim Dennis, Director of Transportation Services with Halton Region, "We have made arrangements to have the work completed and expect the pole replacement to take place next week."

"In the meantime the intersection is operating as an all-way stop," he added.

The traffic lights at Five Sideroad and Ninth Line, which were brought down in an accident last week, likely won't be fixed until next week according to a Halton Region official.

Election boundaries won't change here

The federal and provincial riding of Wellington-Halton Hills won't be changing anytime soon.

Every 10 years, after the census is conducted, the number of electoral districts and their boundaries are revised to reflect population shifts and growth.

The Federal Electoral Boundaries Commission for Ontario has proposed a new electoral map for consideration at public hearings this fall. Ontario will gain 15 electoral districts as a result of the increase in its population.

However, the riding of Wellington-Halton Hills will not be altered.

The riding was created in 2003 from parts of Dufferin-Peel-Wellington-Grey, Guelph-Wellington, Halton and Waterloo-Wellington ridings.

The proposed new electoral districts are located in the following areas: Brampton (2), Cambridge, Durham (2), Hamilton, Markham (2), Mississauga, Oakville, Ottawa, Simcoe, Toronto (2) and York.
