What's Cookin': Creating a new recipe out of necessity

Lori Gysel
& Gerry
Kentner

Have you ever done a cleanse? I don't mean in the bathtub, I mean a dietary cleanse. I've done it a few times before, but I just did one recently and I'd love to tell you about it.

It was 14 days of NO BOOZE, NO SUGAR, more green vegetables than you've ever seen in your whole life, enough water to have you running to the washroom every hour, and of course, there are lots more rules, but I won't bore you with all of it. The point is, it takes quite a bit of will power (at least for me) and imagination.

So, out of necessity, I came up with a new recipe idea. However, I was practically starving to death when I made it, so there was NO WAY I was stopping to put it in a nice bowl and take a nice photo for the paper. I made it and ate it—immediately!

It's a green gazpacho. So, in your food processor put: one and half English cucumbers (skin on, but centre seeds removed), two stalks of celery (roughly chopped), juice of one lime, half cup or so of vegetable stock, a giant handful of cilantro (and I mean giant—roughly chopped), two cloves of garlic, four or five green onions (roughly chopped), a big handful of spinach. Puree until you get a soup-like consistency. If you need more liquid, just add a bit more vegetable stock.

Then, in a mixing bowl, place one half English cucumber (finely chopped), one stalk celery (finely chopped), one ripe avocado (finely chopped) and a small handful of fresh basil (slivered). Add the pureed liquid. Stir and taste for salt and pepper.

Looks a bit weird—most gazpacho recipes have a bit of bread crumb, just to help hold the veg and liquid together, but this one is a total cleanse recipe, so nothing other than veggies.

It was really yummy. I hope you like it too and sorry I was too hungry for a picture. Have fun and keep cooking!

Vegetarian Zucchini Boats

Serves 2

Ingredients

- 1 medium zucchini
- 2 tbsp vegetable oil
- 1/2 to 1/3 cup zucchini diced + scooped out centres
- 1/4 cup red onion, diced
- 1 whole canned artichoke, diced
- 2 tbsp sundried tomatoes (packed in oil), diced
- 1/3 cup roasted red pepper, diced
- 3 tbsp artichoke juice
- 1 tbsp tomato paste
- 2 tbsp fresh chopped parsley
- salt and pepper to taste
- 1/3 cup grated mozzarella or parmesan cheese
- 1/4 cup French's tinned fried onions

Method

1. Bring shallow pan of water to a boil. Cut zucchini in half lengthwise. With a spoon, scrape out the centre seed area to form a hollow shell. Drop zucchini in boiling water for 5 minutes to soften slightly. Remove.

2. Heat oil on medium heat. Sauté diced zucchini and onion until translucent.

3. Add artichokes, sundried tomatoes, red pepper, juice, tomato paste and simmer for 5 minutes.

4. Add parsley, taste for seasoning, then add salt and pepper.

5. Fill zucchini boats with the filling, then cover with cheese and sprinkle with fried onions.

6. Bake in a preheated 375 F oven in a shallow baking pan for approximately 20 minutes.
