Sisnetts open campaign with a bang

Sisnett reported that in the initial “quiet” phase of the Campaign, $382,000 (including the $150,000) has already been raised. Those donations have come from a variety of sources such as individuals, community organizations and corporations.

“Combined with the Town’s investment of $13.6 million and a grant from the Green Municipal Fund of $400,000, I am thrilled to see such community support for this vital project,” said Mayor Rick Bonnette, calling it an incredible donation.

The daughter of John and Norma Elliott, Brenda was part of the first Capital Campaign when the Cultural Centre and Library was first built, 1979-1981. At that time, Norma Elliott made a donation to create the John Elliott Theatre in memory of her husband.

Councillor Ann Lawlor said, “It’s not very often we have two generations of significant givers to a community... so I am glad that Brenda has ... taken the lead from her parents to give these incredible gifts.”

The $1 million will be spent on:

- $110,000 for the Georgetown branch to enhance the Children’s Services, local History Archives and Seniors’ Lounge
- $110,000 to the Acton Branch to create an outside reading deck with café-style tables and seating, lounge furniture and marquee signage near the corner of River St. and Main St.
- $180,000 for an outdoor plaza at the Cultural Centre and Library, featuring native trees, shrubbery and flowers, sculp-

• $600,000 for the Cultural Centre to install new sound and lighting systems, new seating, new art display options for the Art Gallery, and a versatile community room that offers a range of seating options and the latest in audio-visual technology.

The Capital Campaign has already received donations from the Georgetown Homecoming Committee to create a built-in glass display cabinet in the Local History Room and from the Friends of the Library who have donated a double-sided gas fireplace in the Acton branch and a triple-sided fireplace in the Georgetown branch.

Information on how the public can become involved and specifics on upcoming fundraising events will be released in the coming weeks.
