

Register now for Adult Learning Centre computer workshops; tutors wanted

Are you looking for employment but need to upgrade your skills?

Why not jump two hurdles at once? Learn how to use a computer and use this skill to create a cover letter and a resume. Workshops cover the basics of Windows, Word, email and the internet.

The Adult Learning Centre is urging adults in Georgetown and Acton currently looking for work, to register early for their upcoming computer workshops. Starting early October, the Adult Learning Centre (run by Literacy North Halton, a community-based adult learning organization), will be offering computer workshops. These are suitable for adults 19 and older who need to upgrade their skills and learn basic technology.

Registration for workshops is currently underway and space is limited. Classes are scheduled to run Wednesday evenings in Georgetown and Acton for a 10-week period.

If you need to upgrade your reading, writing or basic math skills, the Adult Learning Centre can also assist you. Adult students are matched with volunteer tutors either one-on-one or in small groups. Lessons are held at various locations throughout the community.

Adult volunteer tutors needed! Would you like to give something back to your community? Would you like to help another adult improve their essential skills? Can you spare three hours a week? Training provided. Please call the number below.

To find out more about registering for the Fall computer workshops, or to speak to someone about a more general learning program, please contact the Adult Learning Centre at 905-873-2200 www.literacynh.org
