Q: What advice do you have when choosing an advisor for my insurance and financial needs?

A: You don't have to be wealthy to get good advice about your financial matters. In fact, the amount of money you have isn't relevant. An advisor's expertise and knowledge can help you accumulate wealth and protect your family and your investments. But before choosing the person who's right for you, it's important to do your homework.

The first thing you must do is establish your financial goals. Be specific and put them in writing. Clear objectives will help you create a plan with dollar value and within a specific time frame. Once you know what you want, an advisor can help you develop a strategy to begin your journey to your targets. A budget and a net worth analysis will help you see how realistic your expectations or goals are. The next step is to choose an advisor. Always check their credentials; are they accredited with a recognized financial industry organization, are they licensed to sell insurance products, which investments are they licensed to sell, are they licensed to provide financial planning? All this may take time and effort, but it's worth it to find an advisor you trust and feel comfortable with. Asking the right questions, and adding some research of your own will enable you to choose an advisor who can help you set a wide variety of clear goals, from providing for your family to becoming wealthy by the age of 65!
