PROGRAMMER/ANALYST

The Halton Regional Police Service has a computerized dispatch system which includes Mobile Digital Terminals in patrol vehicles, as well as a computerized records management system. Plans are in place for the upgrading of both systems, including new hardware in 1991. The Service is currently implementing an office automation program which utilizes personal computers and industry standard software.

Reporting to the Manager, Computer Services, you will be responsible for the development implementation and maintenance of all computer systems software within the Service. You will interact with users to solve problems; evaluate test and implement proposed upgrades; monitor system effectiveness; work with vendors and suppliers; interface with other police and government agencies.

You will possess as a minimum, a college diploma or university degree in computer systems or a related discipline, or equivalent experience and background. At least three years experience in on-line systems, preferably on a DEC VAX platform is essential. Experience in communications hardware and software, office automation software and multiple system integration will be considered advantageous. Experience in multiple languages, with COBOL mandatory, is required. Macro-32 and/or other assembly languages is desired. Experience in multiple hardware platforms, notably DEC VAX, BULL-HN and microcomputers is desirable. Supervisory and project management experience is preferred. A security clearance will be completed. The salary, currently ranging from $34,300 to $43,500 will be commensurate with experience; a comprehensive benefit package is also offered.

Resumes should be forwarded by February 22, 1991 to:
