By ANNE LEWIS
She looks majestic and mysterious as she glides along on your TV screen every night on the commercial for the Holland-America Line. The backdrop is one of serene northerly waters, glaciers and rugged mountains as she heads for Alaska. Enviously we watch images of luxury and fun; the voice of the sponsor enjoins us to pamper ourselves, it speaks of unsurpassed service aboard, and we see food being served in an elegant dining room, wonderful food among wonderful flower arrangements on the tables...

She is the MS Noordam, sister ship of two other distinguished ladies, the MS Westerdam and the MS Nieuw Amsterdam. These luxury liners ply Atlantic, Pacific and Caribbean waters en route to various holiday destinations such as Alaska, (as seen in the commercial), Europe and the Caribbean islands.

Picture yourself in a six-tiered circular atrium surmounted by a glass dome, the architecture reminiscent of those marvellous, modern downtown buildings in Toronto; each level of this floating atrium is decorated with original frescoes by leading contemporary artists. This is your first impression on boarding the Fantasy of Carnival Cruise Lines. It is so unlike our traditional image of an ocean-going vessel that we have trouble remembering that we are actually aboard a ship.

Typical of its kind, the Fantasy boasts 10 decks, six of which serve the sole purpose of hosting and entertaining guests. Here are some of the facilities and services available on this ship: an array of restaurants, cafes, lounges and bars; a large, glittering theatre for live entertainment; a movie theatre; the Electricity Discotheque; a video games room with over 200 games and a casino; children's playrooms (supervised, of course, so that Mommy and Daddy can have a nice holiday), a teen club, a glamorous shopping mall with white marble flooring; a beauty salon and barber shop; three pools, a tennis court and a running track; finally, a huge, 12,000 square foot spa where you can enjoy a sauna or a massage, or exercise in a work-out room which spans the entire bow section of the Sports Deck. It is glassed-in on all sides, giving you a direct view of the sea. This, by the way, applies to all the other public areas of the ship, including the vast, two-tiered dining room.

You can sunbathe on one of the marvellous sun decks surrounding a swimming pool while sipping a cool drink, you can walk on the promenade decks and take pictures, you can enjoy the music of live bands in one of the lounges or have a quiet chat with new-found friends in the Egyptian style piano bar; there is ballroom dancing, there are discos and floor shows, in short, there is never a dull moment. To add to the many activities aboard, the Fantasy is equipped with a fancy lighting system: the color of lighting in a given area is apt to change imperceptibly from pale yellow to gentle blue or any other color, bringing about subtle changes in mood. It is with good reason that the Fantasy has been dubbed "the Party Boat."
