GREEN THUMB GARDENING

START SOWING NOW

It is time once again to start planning and planting seeds for this season's flower garden. Many annual flowers from seeds will bloom in 10-12 weeks from their sowing date. Ageratum, Allysum, Dianthus, Dusty Miller, Foxglove, Geranium, Impatiens, Pansy and many others should be started in March. But, fast growers such as Cosmos, Marigold and Zinnia can be started in April. Starting any of these seeds too early in the season results in thin, sparse plants that rarely transplant well into the outdoor garden bed.

A well-drained potting soil or a specially prepared germinating mix is essential for germinating seeds. The seeds can be covered with a thin layer of soil or sand. The seeds should not be covered any deeper than twice the diameter of the seeds. However, Begonia, Pansy and other very small seeds do not require this layer. Once the seeds have germinated, they should be placed in high light to grow. Keep the soil uniformly moist, at all times. Water that is room temperature should be applied during the day, so that the foliage will dry before night. This will reduce the danger of diseases establishing in the soil or on the plant.

Before planting the seedlings in the garden, they should be allowed to adjust to outdoor conditions. Do this by setting them outside or mild days, and bringing them in at night. Once all danger of frost is past, they can be planted in the garden - usually mid-May.

Sow your seeds now, and reap the benefits this summer.

Each week Christine Cole of Tuitman's Garden Centre and Landscaping, Highway 25, 1 mile south of Acton, 853-2480, will be presenting helpful tips and information to assist you in creating your garden showplace!

The Stealth

"Stealth," my boss said, "how can they call a car that goes like that a Stealth?"

Taking a pause to look out the window at Dodge Division's Coke-bottle shaped supercar in blood red, Stealth is probably the last thing you'd call this car if you owned it.

Names I can think of are "breathtaking" for the shape; "impressive" for the grip; but "indecent" best describes the way this car can put 300 hp to the ground and catapult you down the road.

The Stealth comes in base Sport Coupe version at $22,805; the R/T Coupe at $35,641; and the Twin Turbo which is at the top of the hubris scale along with the Porsche Carrera 2 and Acura NSX yet costs half the price at $41,722.

The R/T, as mentioned, has that knock-out shape and the same leather interior with upgraded stereo/cassette/CD stereo but there the comparison ends. The engine is simply too powerful for the front drive only R/T. On crowned roads I had to constantly steer to the right. Hit the gas and it has probably the worst case of torque steer I've ever come across.

For that reason alone, the all-wheel drive of the Twin Turbo is worth stepping up; but just wait until you tie AWD in with the turbo.

The engine is a 3.0-litre, V6 with 24 valves. With high-test fuel and the exhaust restrictors open (more on that later) it produces 300 hp or 100 hp per litre. Very few cars churn out that much power. The 3.0-litre NSX produces 270 hp and the 3.6-litre Porsche pumps out a measly 250 hp. Powerful though it is, Transport Canada says the Twin Turbo will return 9.2 litres of fuel per 100 km or 31 miles per gallon on the highway.

What makes it all manageable is the all-wheel drive. Similar to systems in world championship rally cars, torque is sent to the wheels which can use it the most. As powerful as this car is, it's benign enough for my wife to drive to the store.

What astounds is how trackable the car is in those snow storms we had in January. Using the clutch and gearbox judiciously resulted in the ability to keep up with the 4X4 trucks on the 401 while mere front-drive cars were spinning out.

I believe cars like this don't get you into trouble. They get you out of and away from trouble on the road.

But those buying this car aren't worried about piling in the family for a long trip to the Maritimes. This is a car for someone who enjoys a high-powered car and knows how to use that power correctly.

Call it the bargain basement supercar, but the Dodge Stealth R/T Twin Turbo gives away nothing to the best sports cars in the world.
