BUYING? SELLING? BUYING? SELLING? BUYING? SELLING?

ARE YOU THINKING OF SELLING YOUR HOME?

This space could be used to advertise your home in this strengthening spring market. If you would like a NO OBLIGATION comparative market analysis of the value of your home, please give us a call. We would be very pleased to help you.

ARE YOU THINKING OF BUYING A NEW HOME?

How many questions pop into your mind when you ask yourself this question? How much will it cost to buy the type of house we would like to live in? How much down payment do we need? How do we arrange a mortgage? Are there legal fees involved? What other expenses are we likely to incur? For the answers you need to these and related questions, please give us a call. There is absolutely no obligation on your part, and, once again, we would be only too happy to help.

Natural disposable diapers

Sphagnum, a typical bog moss, forms a thick carpet across the northern wetlands, serving as a base on which other plants can grow. This spongy moss, with its balloon-shaped cells, is able to absorb 25 times its own weight in water (twice the water-holding capacity of cotton), and was commonly used by native Indians for diapers and in World War I for surgical dressing.

With sphagnum growing across northern bogs circulation and drainage of water is slowed. The trapped water soon turns stagnant, losing most of its oxygen. The moss then adds acid, and along with the lack of oxygen, tiny organisms, which usually break down plant and animal material, have a difficult time surviving. Instead of decaying, entire plants just sink to the bottom of the bog, forming the thick ooze called peat. This sucking quicksand has been known to preserve dead trees, moose and even human bodies, for decades, in an air-sealed vault of black muck.

In May 1950, a body was discovered seven feet below the surface of a bog in Denmark. At first, the police believed that the corpse was connected with a recent unsolved crime. Instead, scientists discovered that the body was a perfectly preserved man who had been hanged and buried about 2000 years before. The man, who was probably a willing sacrifice to the gods, still wore the leather rope that had killed him, a leather cap and a grim facial expression.

preserved human bodies have been found in bogs where the low oxygen content and the acid produced by the spongy sphagnum moss stops the micro-organisms that cause decay.

To test the absorption of sphagnum dry a clump of moss and squeeze it in the palm of your hand. It will exhale air, and if you submerge it in water, it will refill just like a kitchen sponge.
