The Maid of Honor and Best Man:

Apart from the bride and groom, no two people play a more important part in the wedding than the maid or matron of honor and the best man.

This honor attendant is indispensable to the bride throughout the wedding. At the altar, she adjusts the veil and train, holds the bouquet during the ceremony and lifts back the veil at the close of the ceremony. She is one of the two witnesses who sign the marriage certificate. She usually helps the bride dress for the wedding, and sees to it that the bridesmaids are dressed and ready on time. She is the bride's lady-in-waiting in all details.

When it is time for the newlyweds to leave the reception to dress for going away, the maid of honor helps the bride change, sees that the luggage is delivered to the best man, and checks on any last-minute details.

The groom usually chooses as his best man his brother, a cousin or a close friend. In some cases, the best man may be the groom's father or favorite uncle.

The best man attends the rehearsal and briefs ushers on special seating arrangements for wedding guest. On the day of the wedding, he takes charge of the wedding ring for the bride. If a ring bearer is used, the best man helps him with his duties at the altar.

The best man helps the groom pack and dress for the wedding, then accompanies him to the church a half-hour before the ceremony is to take place, remaining in the vestry until the wedding march begins. He checks on the marriage license and sees that the groom has it with him before he leaves for the church. He secures the clergyman's fee from the groom and gives it to the minister.

He is the first to toast the bride and groom at the reception. He has the groom's car ready at the right moment and after assists the couple in a safe getaway.
