Although the Halton/Peel riding association of the Reform Party of Canada was only officially established in the fall of last year, it already has some 580 members and that number is growing steadily.

Almost 70 per cent of the Reform Party of Canada membership have never been politically active before. They see the Reform Party as an opportunity to re-establish grass-roots democracy.

"We're following one of the rules of the Reform Party in that we don't spend what we haven't got," says Dick MacDuffee, president of the riding association. "If a riding association goes into debt to get elected, then we shouldn't be too surprised when that same party puts the country further in debt when they're elected."

"We're still building our framework. But I think if other parties knew the structure of committees and the responsible people that we already have in place they would find it most impressive."

"We urge those who believe Canadian citizens should control government rather than the other way around to attend a meeting to learn about Reform Party policies first hand. There have been some wild rumours circulated by other parties about Reform policy to scare people off," says MacDuffee. "Although we're flattered that these other parties are so concerned about our growth, we still want to get the true story out to the public."

Folks concerned about trees being removed along rural roads shouldn't be alarmed. It's all part of the town's annual public works' program.

According to operations engineer Ted Drewlo, trees along both sides of the municipality's roads are either being trimmed or removed altogether. Town crews are currently working along the Eighth Line.

"It's all part of our normal tree trimming programs," Drewlo said. "Dead limbs are removed and that type of thing so they don't fall down on people...It's an annual program — we hire an arborist to inspect the trees to see which ones need trimmed or cut down altogether."
