Diane Atkinson choreographs South Pacific

By SHERRY NORMAN McCLURE
Globe Productions

With Diane Atkinson as choreographer, Georgetown Globe Productions promises to produce an exciting and innovative rendering of Rodgers and Hammerstein's South Pacific.

Diane's relationship with community theatre stretches back to her early days of high school. Her talent and experience in the field of dance won her the opportunity to co-choreograph A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum for Globe in 1991.

DIANE ATKINSON

Her interest in choreography so whetted she seized the opportunity to display her work in South Pacific. To date, Diane has managed to add two dance numbers not found in the original and has arranged for slight changes in music to accommodate the performance of the dancers. Diane said sees her work as a combination of inspiration, brainstorming, and trial and error and when stuck she relies on the input of her assistant Kim Hanna.

Show dates for South Pacific at the John Elliott Theatre are April 30, May 1, 2, 3 and May 7, 8, 9. Tickets are $12 per person and may be purchased at Royal LePage Real Estate in Georgetown.

Entries sought for sculpture contest

A special Canada-wide functional sculpture competition, supported by Vivian and David Campbell, was announced by the Art Gallery of Ontario. The two-stage competition is open to all practising professional artists, designers and architects who are Canadian citizens or landed immigrants.

Deadline date for submissions is May 1, 1992.

Functional sculpture for this competition may include original interpretations of seating, tables, lighting, various containers or other objects. Individually commissioned functional sculpture will be acquired as works of art for the Gallery's permanent collection.

Professional artists, architects and designers who are interested in entering this competition should call (416) 979-6603 to receive a copy of Guidelines for the Functional Sculpture Competition, which includes an entry form and a simple scale drawing of the terrace. Collaborations between eligible groups are encouraged.

Initial submissions will be reviewed by a selection committee composed of artist and design professionals and curatorial staff from the Art Gallery of Ontario. Up to 10 successful applicants will receive a complete specification package and will be invited to submit a comprehensive proposal, including a maquette. Those who participate in this second stage will receive a fee of $1,500.

Deadline for second stage submissions is June 17, 1992.

The jury's final choices will be announced in September 1992. Up to five works will be commissioned. The precise fee for each commission will be stipulated prior to confirmation of the award, but $20,000 has been earmarked as an average, to also cover conceptual development, materials and supervision/realization of the prototype.
