

Computerization may cause disruptions in welfare service

Halton's social services department advises a disruption in service to general welfare assistance clients may occur over the next two weeks.

This is because the general welfare assistance cheque producing system is undergoing conversion to a provincially networked system. Because all staff require training on the new and improved system, some disruption in service will result.

Staff will however be available to deal with emergencies. Service slow down is only anticipated from April 6-24.
