

Students looking for summer work

It's another grim year for students seeking summer employment.

"I expect that it will be pretty tough, as tough as last year and maybe a little worse," said Bruno Jauernig, supervisor of Georgetown's Canada Employment Centre for Students which officially opens on Monday.

Jauernig and his assistant, Sarah Footman, will do everything they can to help students find jobs this summer.

The Georgetown centre serves both Acton and Georgetown, as well as smaller surrounding communities in Halton Hills.

The Canada Employment Centre for Students is a free service to students and employers.

Students are advised to come in regularly to check the job boards and seek advice on resumes and interview tips.

"The focus this year is on getting jobs from employers," said Jauernig. "Generally students know where we are and what we're all about. It's the employers that sometimes don't know."

Jauernig will be placing Hire a Student posters around the area and visiting companies in search of potential student placements. Each year there is a telemarketing campaign to recruit employers.

If you are an employer who has a spot within your organization for a summer student, the Canada Employment Centre for Students will be happy to hear from you.

"Students are very enthusiastic," said Jauernig. "And students generally come cheaper, obviously."

Jauernig has implemented a new feature at Georgetown's student employment centre this year.

Highest percentage of women in Canada

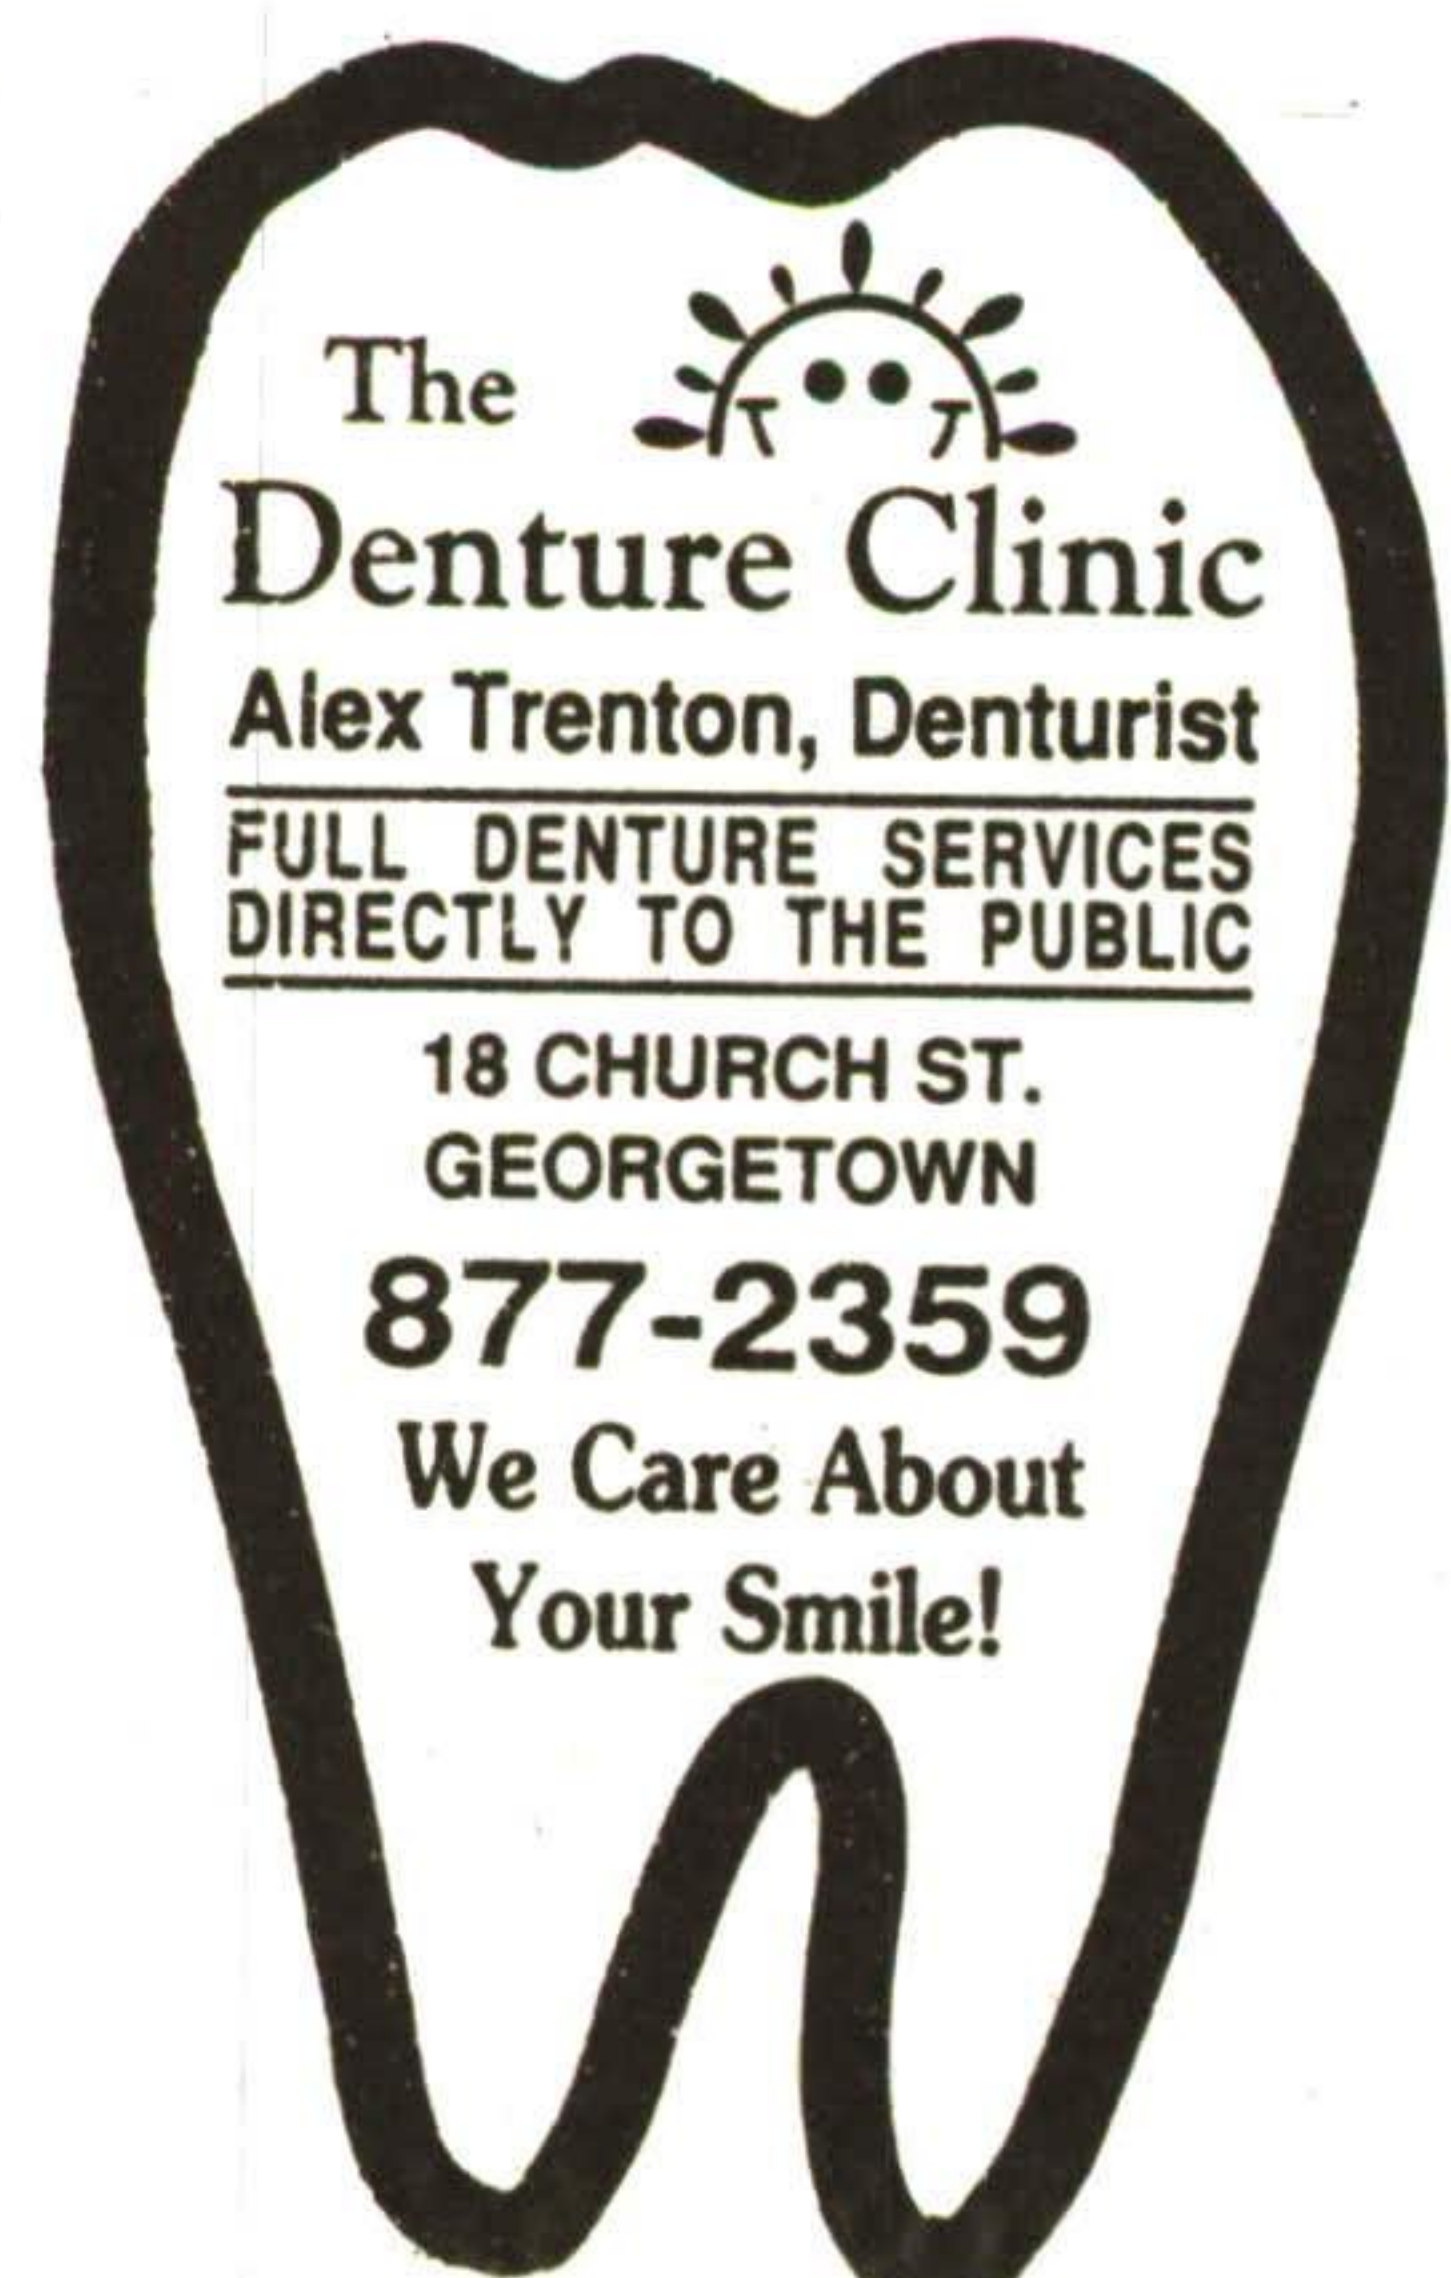

The school of engineering at the University of Guelph has the highest percentage of female students of any engineering school in Canada. Forty per cent of first year students and 32 per cent of the undergraduates are women and its percentage of female faculty and grad students is above the national average.

"It's a great situation, and I hope it continues," says department chair Bill James. "In the past three to four years, our female student numbers have doubled."

He has placed a binder at the bottom of the job postings board which contains the Brampton summer job listings. Jauernig feels this is beneficial as it will expand local students' opportunities if they have access to transportation and are willing to travel a little farther to work.

Jauernig has advice for students seeking employment: "Start early. Work your own contacts. Be very active in your job search. And keep a positive attitude, that's really important."

This summer the student employment centre has a new location. They are located at 232 Guelph Street, between Work that Body and Daddy's BBQ Chicken.

Bruce Jauernig, supervisor at the Canada Employment Centre for Students in Georgetown, would like employers to hire a student this summer. The Georgetown student job boards will serve most of Halton Hills. The centre officially opens on Monday, located at 232 Guelph Street next to Work That Body.
