

Water rationing now in effect

Excess water demand due to lawn watering can strain the capacity of the region's water supply and storage systems. Therefore, Halton's Public Works Department, as part of a water conservation program, is trying to achieve a region-wide reduction in the use of municipal water through a program of mandatory lawn watering restrictions.

Over the past several years the region has had extremely high peak flows which drastically lowered our reservoir levels and gave staff serious concerns as to their ability to supply water to the consumer and for firefighting purposes.

The introduction of water conservation initiatives such as "odd/even day" lawn watering restrictions will assist greatly in reducing peak demands and thereby delay the need for plant expansions and storage reservoir construction.

The lawn watering restrictions involve an "odd/even day" system to reduce peaks in water demand. Properties with odd numbered municipal addresses (e.g. 1,3,5, etc.) will be allowed to water the lawns on odd calendar days. Properties with even numbered municipal addresses will be allowed to water the lawns on even calendar days. For townhouse units where the unit number is included in the municipal address (e.g. Unit #101, 2 Main Street), the unit number will apply (i.e. the odd #101 and not the even 2 Main Street).

As in previous years, the program is implemented on a region-wide year round basis for all properties serviced by municipal water supply. Private wells and surface water from ponds and streams are excluded from this program.

The water restriction program does not include the following: car washing, flower, garden and tree watering by hand, water uses via hand held spray nozzles, newly placed sodding during the maintenance period, lawns treated with herbicide, pesticide or fertilizer which requires water.

The water restriction program does include the following: all residential, commercial and industrial properties, all municipally-owned properties such as schools, parks, arenas, community centres, public works facilities, etc., golf courses using municipal water.

The program will be enforced by Halton's Public Works staff. A maximum fine of $2,000 may be assessed on violators contravening this provision of the Regional Water Use By-law 93-89.

Water conservation should reduce the amount of water being used by the consumer and therefore reduce the amount of water being treated and pumped.

For further information please contact Vince Suffoletta, P.Eng., manager of Technical Services, at 825-6000, extension 7735.

Ready for action

A burst of water explodes from a hydrant while Art Robertson of Halton Region Public Works checks the capacity of one of the hydrants on Maple Ave. east, in Georgetown as Halton Region conducted flow tests in the area of the new development. The test indicates the capacity of the hydrant when other hydrants in the area are in use.
