

OMAF set to open Georgetown office

The Georgetown Field Office of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food (OMAF) officially opens its doors June 1, with several special guests taking part in the ribbon-cutting ceremony.

The official opening will occur at 10 am with Paul Klopp, MPP, parliamentary assistant to the Minister of Agriculture and Food giving an address. Other guests in attendance will include Peter Pomeroy, chairman of Halton Region and Emil Kolb, chairman of Peel Region.

Barry Sinclair, agricultural representative of the Georgetown Field Office will chair the ceremony.

The Georgetown Field Office opened March 30. Its staff come from the former Milton and Brampton offices. The Georgetown office serves the regions of Halton and Peel.

Several branchers have staff which work out of the new office. Agricultural Representatives Branch is primarily responsible for the office and deals with the day-to-day livestock and crop production and financial management calls as well as delivering many of the ministry's programs. Rural Organizations and Services Branch is involved in leadership training and works with several rural organizations including 4-H. Plant Industry Branch has two staff located in the office. One person is responsible for the field crops in the four regions of York, Wentworth, Halton and Peel. The second person is the provincial nursery specialist. All staff look forward to helping clients in their new location.

The Agricultural Representatives Offices have been in Ontario since 1907. The first office in Peel opened in 1913 in Brampton. Halton's first office was opened in Burlington in 1914 and was later moved to Milton in 1920.
