

Sunday shopping

"We're still wondering if we'll open. We won't this Sunday, we're waiting to see what happens with the mall," Grezoux said.

MPP Noel Duignan said the government expects Sunday openings will become law. Public opinion on Sunday shopping has changed over the past couple years, which is why the NDP government has changes its view, and decided to allow Sunday shopping.

Duignan points to a readership survey conducted in Halton Hills by the Georgetown Independent/Acton Free Press. Two years ago, a poll revealed people opposed Sunday shopping by a 2 to 1 margin. Last year residents were evenly split on the issue and this year 63 per cent said Sunday openings should be allowed with no restrictions.

"I've always been opposed to Sunday shopping, right through the election campaign and now," Duignan said. But he recognizes lots of his constituents are in favor of Sunday openings, and he wants to talk to people in his riding before deciding which way to vote on the proposed amendments which allow for unrestricted Sunday openings, except on statutory holidays. Businesses will be free to close any other day of the week, and employees will have the right to refuse to work on Sundays.
