School fears for safety with loss of adult crossing guard

Council is considering replacing an adult crossing guard on Rexway Dr. at Harrison public school in Georgetown with a Grade 5 student.

A staff report on the traffic situation carried out in May measured the number of children crossing the road during peak hours as well as the number of safe gaps in traffic, of 13 seconds. It found there are an adequate number of safe gaps in traffic and, according to criteria, an adult crossing guard would not be necessary.

"I have spoken to the principal, the parents, to Tom Politi, and all recommend it is not a good spot for a student (guard)," Councillor Ron Chatten said.

But the issue was debated, and the committee decided to send the report to the school to allow the principal, Max Jackson, and parents to comment on it before a decision is made.

A crossing guard costs about $4,800 annually.

No objections to mobile home

No one showed up to a public meeting Monday night at Halton Hills council chambers to discuss a temporary mobile home as a second residence at the north side of Steeles Ave. in Esquesing Township. Meeting chairman Rob Heaton made a note that there was no one present on the proposal, and closed the meeting.

Pearl Street renaming

Town councillors asked staff to draft a bylaw renaming a portion of Somerville Rd. in Acton Monday night. The new name would be Pearl Ct. The proposed street name change was advertised and no one objected. There are only four lots on this street which are occupied, and all are on a portion of the road which is not being changed. Pearl St. will be the portion west of Cedar Rd.

New sand/salt loader

The town plans to buy a Michigan loader for $76,000 to replace another loader which is 11 years old. The new equipment will include a computerized weighing device and a printer, which will provide a written readout of the weights of sand and salt distributed by the machine during the winter months.
