High school vandalism

Acton High School was vandalized last weekend. Culprits entered a fenced compound at the rear of the school and damaged a hard top camper trailer. Seven clearance light covers were smashed, canvas was ripped and a portion of the top air vent smashed, said police reports. The culprits also removed cushions and drapes which were then recovered from the school roof. Police estimate the damage at close to $3,000.

Crossing guard

A crossing guard will be stationed on Rexway Dr. in Georgetown during the coming school year, council decided Monday. Harrison School Principal Max Jackson attended the meeting and told council that in a survey of parents, he found they favored a crossing guard over improved traffic lights six to one. Jackson doesn't recommend using Grade 5 students to help other children cross the street. Council accepted his information, and decided to continue using the crossing guard during the 1992-93 school year.
