Farmers' market's opening is delayed

The ministry of transportation has stalled plans for a new farmers' market north of Georgetown on Trafalgar Rd.

Three Erin residents were set to open their new business venture just in time for Christmas, but ran into a wall of bureaucracy when they attempted to gain the necessary permits to operate from the Niagara Escarpment Commission.

Before the NEC will allow the business to operate (the market is located within the NEC's planning area, south of Silver Creek on Trafalgar Rd.) they must conduct a traffic impact study for the ministry of transportation.

So far, 40 businesses had committed themselves to setting up shop in the market before the holidays, but now they will have to wait until early February to sell their wares.

The market will feature food and produce from area farms as well as a flea market of sorts for local craftspeople and artisans to offer their merchandise.

About 10,000 square feet of floor space within two buildings is available, half of which will be devoted to food stalls, while the other half will feature crafts and other goods.

Pomeroy angered by landfill selection

Pomeroy noted that they chose sites close to Halton Hills because of its low population, figuring the town wouldn't have the resources to fight back.

Regional solicitor Mark Meneray is reviewing the feasibility of taking court action, and will report back to council as soon as possible.

Pomeroy was angry because Halton spent well over $10 million over several years just to get approval for its Milton landfill, which opened for business last month. Part of the process involved looking at several locations, numerous tests, hearings and public meetings. Pomeroy feels the IWA has skipped through most of that.

Pomeroy challenged MPP Noel Duignan to "challenge the decision of his minister" of Environment minister Ruth Grier.

Winner in the annual Ebenezer United Church Women Draw were F.R. Delany, left, who won the Comb-Back Windsor arm chair donated by furniture maker Peter Lister and Lisa Sprostranov who won the Anne of Green Gables print by Karl Barnhart, donated by Wyget Woods Art Gallery. Anne Bell won the dinner for two at Jack Tanner's Table. The winning ticket seller was the Brookville Trading Post who received a pine hall mirror donated by Loon-Woods Ltd.
