

Tom Ramautarsingh got help from David Coles, Bobby Coles, Stanley McEnery and Julie McEnery as they loaded about 4,000 books and educational material for Grenada as part of 'Operation Stacking the Libraries.'

Books headed to Grenada

Over the past eight years Georgetown's 1988 Citizen of the Year and president of the Canadian College of Teachers (Niagara Chapter) has been visiting Grenada in the West Indies to share in some educational activities.

He addressed the OCOD (Organization and Cooperation of Overseas Development) Conference on the latest researches in education, gave workshops, wrote papers on reading and learning styles, and took teams of Ontario educators to work in areas of curriculum development and assessment, computers, special education and guidance and counselling.

Ramautarsingh, on his visits to elementary and secondary schools, saw the great need for books and educational materials. With the assistance of Michael Frederiksen (Peel Board of Education and a member of the first team to Grenada), about 4,000 books and educational materials were collected. These included class sets of novels, Shakespearean plays, drafting, accounting, history, geography, English, mathematics, science and other reading materials.

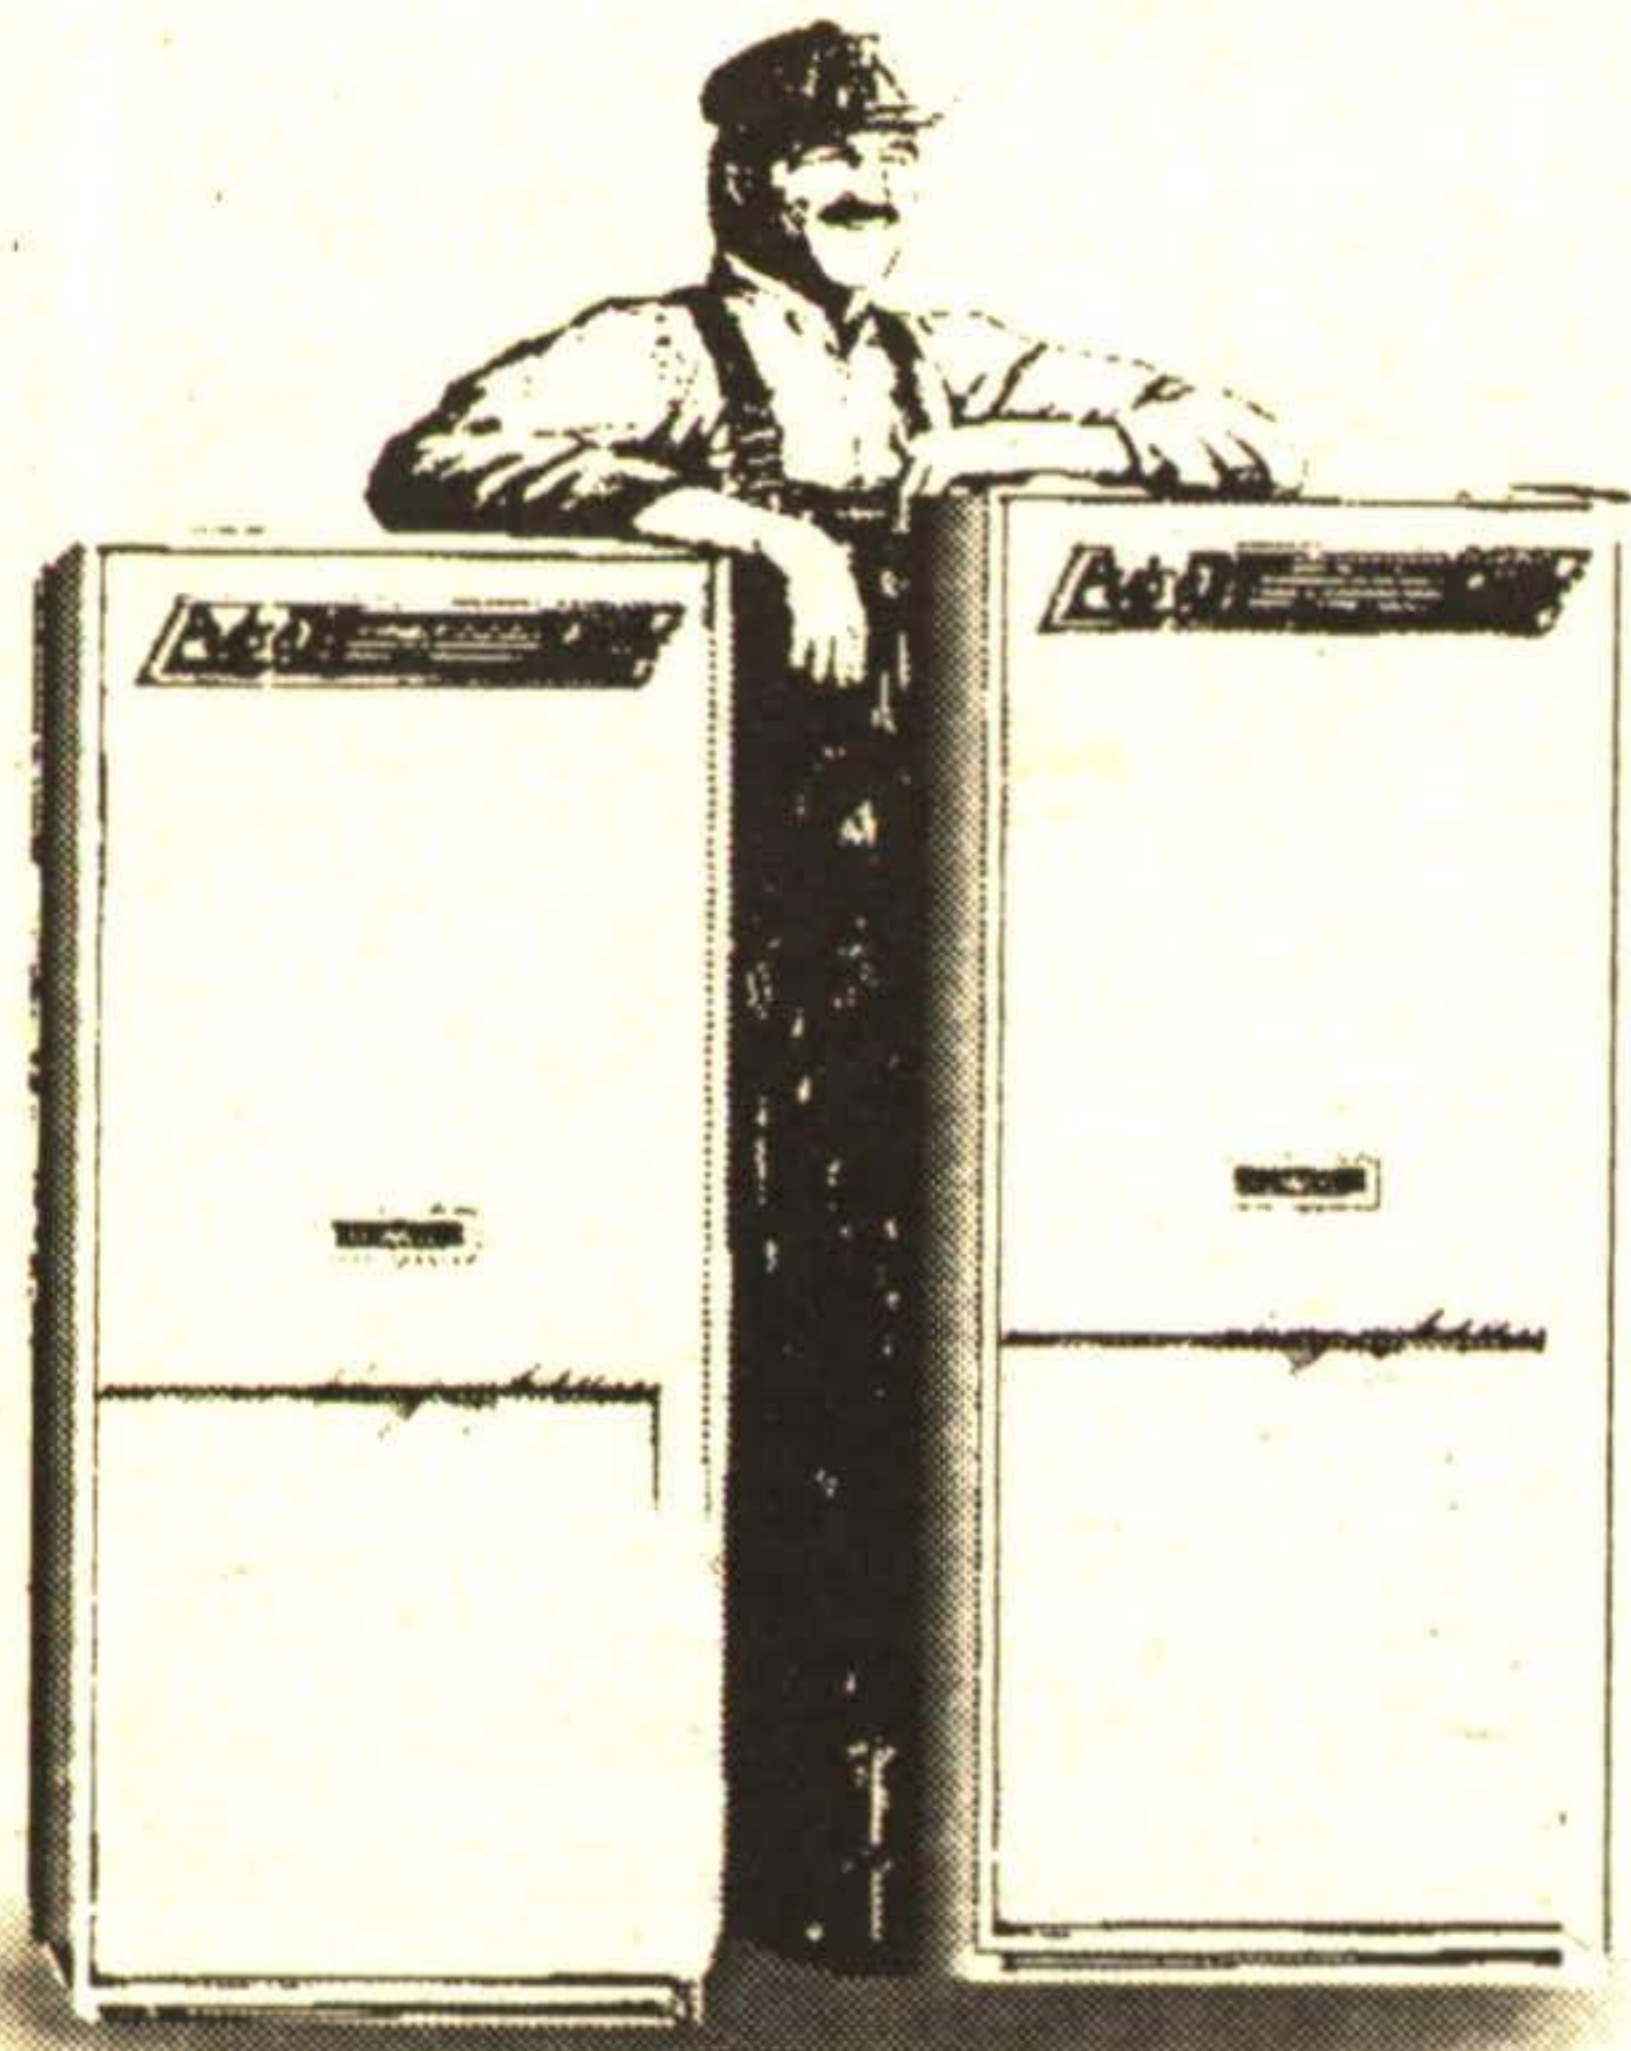

Ramautarsingh had great praise for Terminal Warehouse (transportation), Foberts (storage), the McEnerys of Limehouse (storage, transportation and manpower), for their cooperation in bringing to reality "operation stacking the libraries" in Grenada.

A big thank you also goes out to Bob Sanderson (Bramalea) where the two huge truck loads of materials were loaded in his container. The Canadian Foundation for World Development delivered the container to the Ministry of Education in Grenada.

"The books and educational materials have arrived in St. George's, Grenada. It is a wonderful Christmas gift. Sharing and helping another Commonwealth country are things Canadians do best and the people of Grenada deeply appreciate this kind gesture and great assistance," says Tom Ramautarsingh.
