

A toast to the graduates

The Georgetown Toastmaster Club held their season's last regular meeting on Monday, July 5 with a presentation to the five graduates of the eight-week Speechcrafters course that is designed to help participants develop better public speaking skills. Back (from left), Toastmaster's outgoing president, Mike Toole; new president Chris Miller; and graduates, Joanne Peale, Dennis Korneluk, and front (from left), program manager at the Job-Finding Club, Linda Brasz, Jan Parker and the Job-Finding Club's administrative asst. Karen MacIntyre. This was the first time the Toastmasters worked with the Job-Finding Club to promote speaking abilities and all the Speechcrafters grads were participants from the job club.

Names given to new parks

Two parks in Georgetown South were given names at the council meeting Monday night.

One park, located on Eaton St., will be called Eaton Neighborhood Park, and the other, on Barber Dr., will be known as Barber Drive Neighborhood Park.

Only three name suggestions were sent in by local citizens, who were asked to help name the parks. A suggestion to call one of the parks, Hungry Hollow Park was turned down. Council wants to save the "Hungry Hollow" name for the valley area known as the hollow.

CNIB request denied

At Monday's council meeting members turned down a request by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) to hold a fund-raising event in town next month. "Roll or Toll" would have seen CNIB volunteers stopping traffic and requesting a donation.
