Summer vacations

Follow some easy tips to burglar-proof your home

This summer, hundreds of thousands of people take vacations and with July and August being the most frequent vacation time; it is also the most frequent time for burglaries.

For those planning on taking a holiday, police and security officials give some advice:

- Make your home look as occupied as possible, and refrain from letting the whole town in on the fact that your home will be vacant for a period of time.

- Have friends and neighbors watch your home and take in the newspaper and flyers. It might be a good idea (depending on the duration of your holiday) to have someone maintain your yard for you.

- Put out lights, lots of them, on timers - set the timers to sensible hours, ones that would suit your daily lifestyle. You might want to do the same with a radio.

- Special locking devices are available. "If you do choose an alarm system, make sure it's installed by professionals. If protected by an alarm system, notify the security company that you'll be away. And ask police to check your home periodically," says Doug Rowlands, executive director of Marketing, Sales and Service for ADT Canada Inc.

Helpful tips for travellers

A reminder to make those pre-trip preparations ensuring a care-free holiday.

- Purchasing travel insurance is one way you can prepare. Most Canadians are unaware of the cost of health benefits and the variation between provinces.

- Make sure to leave a complete daily itinerary of your trip with a friend and/or a person in your work place, including names, addresses and phone numbers.

- Pack a photocopy of id in case of theft or loss of your wallet as well as recording the serial numbers of travellers cheques if you happen to be bringing them along.
